BINHO

Binho Ribeiro, born Fabio Luiz Santos Ribeiro in 1971, is a pioneering Brazilian street artist active since 1984. Influenced by the burgeoning hip-hop, skate, and breakdance movements from New York during the 1980s, he became a significant figure in Latin American street art.

His vibrant murals and artworks have been showcased globally, with notable pieces in cities such as Tokyo, Los Angeles, New York, Paris, and Cape Town, as well as across various Brazilian states.

Beyond creating art, Binho has curated significant street art projects, including the Museu Aberto de Arte Urbana de São Paulo- the world's first open-air urban art museum—and the Bienal Internacional de Graffiti Fine Art.

He has collaborated with international artists and brands, contributing to advertising campaigns and projects for companies like Nestlé, Nike, and Sony.

In addition to his artistic endeavors, Binho manages a cultural production company that promotes urban art in Brazil and operates a lifestyle store named 3 Mundo.
