Guava De Art, also known as Ron Howell, is a self-taught artist hailing from Antigua and Barbuda, whose work spans a vast array of mediums, including illustration, painting, sculpting, 3D modeling, art toy creation, and digital drawing/animation. His versatile artistic style has garnered international acclaim, with his pieces reaching audiences in the United States, United Kingdom, Japan, Canada, and beyond. The nickname Guava originated in his childhood when his mother would send him to school with guavas, earning him the affectionate title of "Guava Man" from his peers—a name that has stayed with him throughout his life.

Having studied Television and Video Production in Canada, Guava began his professional painting career in 2007. Over time, he opened his own art gallery, starting in his mother's house and later relocating to the vibrant Redcliffe Quay in Antigua.

Guava's art is deeply personal, born from his desire to protect himself from the harshness of the world. "Born on this planet and saw how mankind is," he says, "I decided to cover myself in strips of canvas to shield me from sadness, anger, stress, and everything negative the world throws at me." His eyes are intentionally concealed, but his heart is exposed, symbolizing his belief in judging others not by their outward appearance, but by their character. His work invites viewers to engage with him on a deeper, more human level, reflecting both vulnerability and strength.
